

The secularisation and paganisation of large sections of Europe is tragic. There are surprisingly dynamic pockets of spiritual vitality and life amidst the general atheism and heathenism, but the general picture in Europe is of spiritual decline.

Missionary Power House

In 1900, Evangelicals in Europe constituted 45% of the world's Evangelicals. Now less than 4% of all Evangelicals in the world are in Europe. The 19th century was the greatest century of Missionary advance. It was a century of astounding inventions and of spectacular advances in technology. Many countries in Europe experienced dynamic Spiritual Revivals. Christian missionaries from Europe won whole tribes and nations to Christ, in the remotest regions of the globe. For over a thousand years, Europe had been Christendom, the heartland and stronghold of Christian civilisation. The 19th century has seen such staggering growth in numbers, productivity, power and wealth, that most would have imagined that Europe would have continued to dominate the globe for centuries to come. The optimism which had prevailed in the 19th century gave way to profound pessimism after the First World War.

Devastation

However, World War I shattered Europe. An entire generation of young men died in brutal trench warfare. 1914 marked the end of the greatest century of Christian advance and the beginning of what proved to be the worst century of persecution. The consequences of the First World War, continues to have far-reaching repercussions to this present day. Of the 60 million European soldiers who were mobilised from 1914 to 1918, over 9 million were killed, 7 million permanently disabled and 15 million seriously injured.

Retreat from Victory

At the first World Missions Conference, in Edinburgh, in 1910, delegates were anticipating the completion of the Great Commission within their generation. No one in 1910 would have anticipated the wholesale abandonment of entire nations to communism, false religion and heathenism. Nor would anyone have predicted that the church would retreat from victory to such an extent that they would even be questioning the existence of the devil, or hell, or reinterpreting marriage to include what God and the Bible describes as perversion and an abomination.

Secularism

The cataclysmic conflict of the First World War has to be recognised as one of the most tragic and senseless conflicts in history. Even more devastating than the actual numbers of the people killed, crippled, or seriously injured, was the damage to the spiritual life of Europe. Europe went from being a majority church attending population to a continent where most people do not go to any church.

Revolution

The secularisation of Europe and the moral breakdown coincided with a great resurgence of revolutionary fervour and Marxist communism which filled the vacuum left by the collapse of the Russian Empire and emergence of many new countries in Eastern Europe.

The de-Christianisation and secularisation of Europe was not only unprecedented in its scope and speed, but would have been unthinkable before the First World War. Social Darwinism had become popular amongst most governments in Europe. This thinking emphasized the importance of armed struggle between nations as healthy and necessary for progress and evolution. In the wake of the two World Wars, many came to speak of a post-Christian era. Wars and revolutions through the entire world led to disorder and Christianity was generally marginalised throughout Europe.

Christophobia

Christians in Britain are speaking of a Christophobia, where an irrational hatred and fear of Christianity is increasing. Church buildings have been vandalised with anti-Christian graffiti on the walls and property looted. British Hotel and Bed and Breakfast owners have been sued and fined for refusing accommodation to homosexual partners. Street preachers have been arrested for proclaiming what God's Word says about perversion.

Unethical Compulsion

Medical staff have been placed under extraordinary pressure to participate in procedures which they are convinced are unethical, such as sterilisations, euthanasia and abortions. Many European Union States, do not provide for conscientious objection for medical personnel. Many midwives, doctors, nurses and pharmacists are being placed under unbearable pressure to go against their conscience. In France, pharmacists are being compelled by law, to sell the abortion drug, RU486.

Desecration

Churches and cemeteries in Spain and France have been desecrated and vandalised by Muslim immigrants. In Norway many historic Christian churches have been burned down by arsonists.

War Against God

Prominent black metal adherents have been convicted of arson, including burning down the 850 year old Fantoft Stave Church. Black metal fans have declared war on Christianity and a prominent black metal band Burzum, produced an album entitled Aske (Ashes) with a picture of the charred remnants of this famous Viking Church. Many black metal and witch house music groups openly declare their hatred of Christianity.

Marginalisation

The marginalisation of Christians and legal limitations on them is increasingly being recognised as a serious problem. Even Queen Elizabeth II has spoken out against this ominous trend. From hate crimes to legal restrictions, arrests and lawsuits, freedom of religion, freedom of expression and freedom of conscience are under severe stress in most of Europe.

Libel

One example is how Norwegian mass murder, Anders Breivik, was instantaneously and falsely labelled a "Christian fundamentalist" by media worldwide. There was absolutely no evidence of this. In fact, his own writings on the web made clear that he rejected Christianity and rejected the Christian God. Yet anti-Christian prejudices needed a Christian equivalent to Muslim terrorism. All too many journalists thoughtlessly and hastily welcomed this anti-Christian fanatic as a "Christian fundamentalist". In many cases this is the same media that refuses to identify the terrorists inspired by Islamic Jihad as Muslim fanatics.

Fired for Prayer

Dr. David Drew was fired for e-mailing a prayer to hospital colleagues. 64 year old, Dr. Drew, who for 40 years had been a senior Medical Director at the hospital, was dismissed for e-mailing a prayer which he thought would be inspirational to his colleagues. The offensive prayer was: "Teach us Good Lord to serve as You deserve, to give and not to count the cost, to fight and not to head the wounds, to toil and not to seek for rest, to labour and not to ask for any reward, save that of knowing we do Your will."

Double Standards

The head of the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), Mark Thompson, admitted that Christianity is treated with far less sensitivity than other religions, because "it is pretty broad-sho uldered."

He said that as other faiths have a very closely identity with ethnic minorities and as they had to consider the possibilities of "violent threats" instead of polite complaints, which is more common from Christians. The BBC tended to apply satire towards Christianity rather than, for example, Islam. "Without question, 'I complain in the strongest possible terms,' is different from, 'I complain in the strongest possible terms and I am loading my AK47 as I write.'"

No Crosses Allowed

Although British Airways allows members of other religions special status for religious garments, such as the Muslim Hijab, the Sikh turban, or Kara bracelet, Christian employees have been forbidden to wear crosses which they claim breach BA's uniform code.

Senseless Hypocrisy

The BBC has also been criticised for its "senseless hypocrisy" in no longer referring to dates by BC (before Christ) or AD (Anno Domini), but to what they call religiously neutral terms of BCE (Before Common Era) and CE (Common Era).

Anti-Christian Bias

British member of parliament, David Simpson, responded to the frequent claims of secular campaigners that Christianity has been the cause of the world's worst historical crimes by pointing out that it was, in fact, ideologically atheist regimes that committed the very worst atrocities throughout the 20th century. He also pointed out that Christians are facing increasing persecution at the hands of aggressive secularism: "In the United Kingdom, the policy seems to be that people can do whatever they like against Christianity - criticise it or blaspheme the Name of Christ - as long as they do not insult Islam. It is sad because this country is based on civil and religious liberty for all."

Legal Harassment

He catalogued numerous cases where British Christians who publically object to homosexuality, sex education and abortion, or who simply try to share their faith with others, have faced prosecution.

A Deafening Silence

Yet the British government remains mostly silent about the massacres of thousands of Christians at the hands of Muslim militants in Northern Nigeria, in Ethiopia, in Sudan and in Pakistan. Christianity is completely outlawed in many Arab States, including Kuwait, Syria, Yemen and Saudi Arabia. The fact is, secular humanism is the most destructive religion of all time and the most intolerant.

Europe for Christ

Europe today must be one of the most spiritually needy continents on earth. The Church is called to be "a house of prayer for all nations." Are you, your family and your congregation praying regularly for Christians suffering intolerance and discrimination in Europe? Pray that the Lord of the harvest will thrust out labourers into His harvest field to win this continent back to Christ.
